Brightworks SCHOOL

Don't play with fire. Don't mess with electricity. Don't get dirty. These are some of the rules in many schools - but not in Brightworks in California, USA! In this school, children don't learn from books: they find out things on their own and then write or speak about what they find out. The school hasn't got normal classrooms. There are spaces for a canteen, an Art room, a Science lab and a library all in one huge room! The teachers don't stand in front of a blackboard and talk either. They walk around and help the students - but only when the students ask questions. Students also go on trips to learn about the world outside their school. They visit national parks, museums, the space centre and the beach!

At Brightworks, they don't have classes. Students work in groups of 7 to 10. They aren't always the same age, and so the older ones help the younger ones. At Brightworks, everyone is a teacher! It's a fun and friendly place, and the best school for students that like to learn by doing.

1. Brightworks isn't like the other schools. _____
2. Children learn from books. _____
3. They go on school trips every week. _____
4. All the children in the group are the same age. _____
5. How do children learn? _____
